Poe runs for council: 'How hard can it be?'

An unlikely candidate. Nikki Allen Poe, a comedian, pot activist and federal criminal, is running as a Libertarian for a vacant city council seat this month. Does he have a chance? He sure thinks he does. PAGE 02

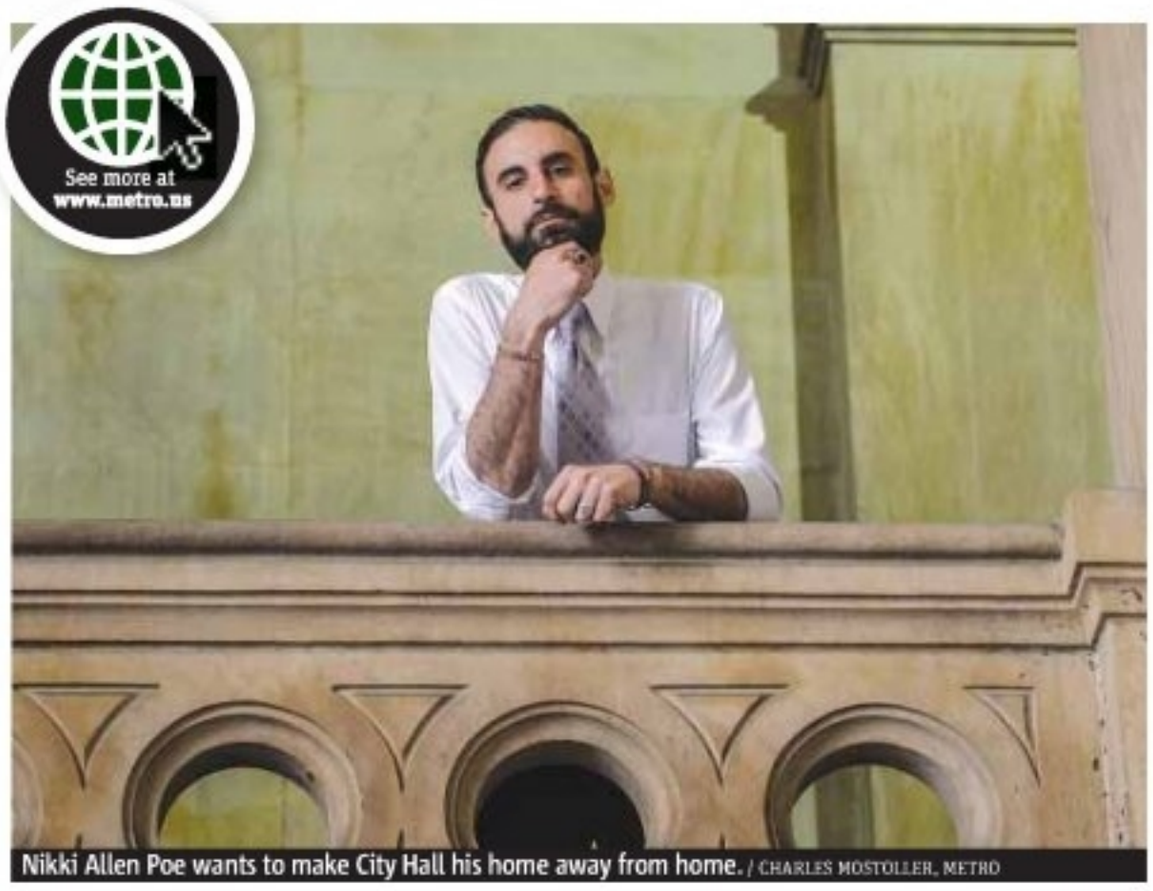
Poe: From comedian to activist to candidate

'Liberty-minded.' The Libertarian candidate is 'sick of corruption in City Hall.'



Nikki Allen Poe wants to make City Hall his home away from home. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

Stop me if you've heard this one: A stand-up comic turns into a targeted pot activist, then a federal criminal and now, a politician.

Probably not. Yet that's the tale of N.A. Poe, the local comedian and pro-pot advocate currently serving probation for charges stemming from a bust at a legalization rally in May 2013 at Independence Park.

This same Poe is running as a Libertarian candidate for city council against Republican Matthew Wolfe and Democrat Ed Neilson in a special election to fill a vacant seat created by at-large councilman Bill Green on May 20.

"Should be a cinch, right? " asked Poe.

A cinch? Who knows, but certainly a serious attempt at being heard.

"I wouldn't necessarily consider myself a Libertarian, but I'm definitely liberty-minded," said Poe. "I'm sick of corruption in City Hall, union control of politics and crooked cops. I'm running on the platform of pot decriminalization, ending the racist stop-and-frisk policy and stopping this city's funding of the Orwellian fusion center that's collecting our data."

You're not laughing now.

Poe didn't start out working for this city's welfare. The Overbrook-born, South Philly resident's initial goal as a comic was to "craft the perfect d— joke." He then alienated himself from the comedy scene by darkly exploring political and social justice issues. Poe found himself drawn to the Occupy Philadelphia movement in 2011, becoming its CEO of "digital gonzo journalism" and documenting the group in real time.

"I'm a concerned citizen who didn't trust the media or the government, so I was thankful to be in an 'activist boot camp'" said Poe. "I cut my teeth there."

Poe's pro-pot ideology grew, although he's not about stoner theology. "I love weed, but I'm not Tommy Chong." From there, Poe and folks from NORML (National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws) initiated Smoke Down Prohibition and its civil disobedience rallies, including one at the Liberty Bell in May 2013.

"Law enforcement from five federal agencies were there. I emceed the program, and at 4:20 p.m., surrounded by cops, I led a countdown and sparked a joint. I was subdued, tackled to the ground by three rangers and hog-tied."

Poe spent six days in a local federal detention center and charged with interference with an agency function, disorderly conduct and possession of a controlled substance. In December 2013, he was given one year's probation.

Poe's probation has hit speed bumps. Reports state he ate a marijuana-laced cookie before February's mandatory drug test and admitted using Percocet and cocaine in an April probation interview (Poe couldn't comment on charges). Neither problem has stopped Poe's political ambitions or slowed his pursuit of taking down the Philadelphia Parking Authority during a May 9 campaign rally outside of the PPA on Filbert Street.

"If elected, I'll buy a few suits, curb my use of expletives and spend my days being a thorn in the side of the political machine," said Poe. "I may not have experience, but I have passion to work hard and create real change. If Maria Quiñones-Sanchez and Curtis Jones can do the job, how hard can it be?"

Crash. Bridge victim ID'd as Penn student

A memorial of flower bouquets has been created at the spot on the Walnut Street bridge where a 27-year-old incoming UPenn graduate student fell 38 feet to his death after being struck by a car involved in a collision.

Zachary Woods, 27, of Monroe, New York, was pronounced dead around 10 p.m. on Tuesday, 12 hours after the accident occurred.

Reports say Woods had just moved to Philadelphia on May 4.

Woods was fluent in Chinese and had worked on developing village sewage systems in rural China. He was about to begin a combined Wharton MBA and international studies degree graduate program. SAM NEWHOUSE

The Amur tigers at the Philadelphia Zoo try out the new Big Cat Crossing on Wednesday. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

Zoo's newest attraction: Here there be tygers

If you build it, they will come. Zoo unleashes big cats into new elevated tunnel, open to the public Saturday.

Cautiously, Dimitri, a nearly 2-year-old Amur tiger, placed a paw into an elevated tunnel and was greeted by a roar of applause from humans below.

Soon, Dimitri's twin brother Wiz joined him in romping through their new open-air pathway, which both tigers clearly enjoyed. The two brothers nuzzled and pawed each other as onlookers cheered and snapped cell phone photographs.

This was the scene after the Philadelphia Zoo's Big Cat Crossing was officially opened by Gov. Tom Corbett's young grandson Liam on Wednesday morning.

"You are leading not the nation but the world in how we treat animals in our zoos," Corbett declared at the opening, noting the Philadelphia Zoo's commitment to treating animals humanely and respectfully goes back to its founding in 1874.

Corbett said that although most adults take in zoos calmly, he wonders if it is because they have lost their "sense of wonder."

But the faces of children seeing the zoo for the first time are always "bright with wonder ... with eyes wide open and smiles across their faces," Corbett said, thanks to attractions such as Big Cat Crossing.

Big Cat Crossing is the third tunnel in the zoo to allow animals to "run, swing and roam from their usual homes to distant places across the zoo," said the zoo's board chairman Jay Calvert, as part of the zoo's signature "Zoo360" system.

Dimitri, born June 28, 2012, (just before midnight) and Whiz, born June 29, just after midnight, both hail from Columbus, Ohio.

- Zoo president Vikram Dewan said the Philadelphia Zoo is dedicated to protecting rare species from extinction due to deforestation by palm oil manufacturers in places like Sumatra.
- Dewan urged visitors to only buy deforestation-free palm oil.

Co-op reveals store location

The Kensington Community Food Co-op, a membership-based food market based in the East Kensington area, announced on Sunday that they found a location for their envisioned central supermarket: at Frankford and Lehigh avenues, inside the former O'Reilly's Pub.

The pub's storefront location comes with a liquor license. The co-op still needs to raise about $500,000 to begin renovations and construction.

The co-op's market would be open to the public but offer discounts to members who work at the store. SAM NEWHOUSE

Teen charged for attack on senior wig shop clerk

Beating. A teen boy was caught on security video assaulting a 67-year-old female store clerk.

A 14-year-old boy was charged on Wednesday with beating a 67-year-old West Philadelphia wig store employee in late April, police said.

The juvenile, whose name is being withheld because of his age, walked into the Wynnfield Judy Wig store on the 1900 block of North 54th Street about 7 a.m. on April 29 and demanded money from the worker, police said.

The boy confronted the woman in one of the boutique's narrow aisles and demanded money. When she attempted to dial 911 on her cell phone, the boy shoved her into a glass display case at the front of the store and then he punched and kicked her until she hit the floor, and then he continued the assault.

The same teen is suspected of stealing $70 from the same store's register on April 29. Police said the woman had chased the boy from the store during that first encounter. Police said the woman was treated for minor injuries.

Yellen says economy still needs help, housing poses risk

Concerns. Yellen said there can be potentially risky investment behavior given the extended period of low rates.

Federal Reserve Chairwoman Janet Yellen said on Wednesday the U.S. economy was still in need of lots of support given the "considerable slack" in the labor market, adding that the housing sector's weakness and geopolitical tensions also posed risks.

Even as she took note of "appreciable" improvements in the jobs market, Yellen told a congressional committee that the high rate of long-term unemployment and a slow rise in worker pay suggested plenty of room for further job gains. "A high degree of monetary accommodation remains warranted," she told the Joint Economic Committee.

Yellen said she expected the economy to expand at a "somewhat" faster pace than last year, but flagged weakness in the nation's housing sector and the possibility of heightened geopolitical tensions or the re-emergence of financial stress in emerging markets as potential risks.

U.S. stocks slipped after her testimony was released but later steadied, while prices for government debt were little changed. The dollar rose against a range of currencies.

Yellen expressed faith that at least part of the decline in labor force participation could be reversed. She also said she had very little doubt that the share of Americans working part-time because they could not find full-time work would also come down. REUTERS

DMV. New Hampshire court allows 'COPSLIE' vanity license plate

A New Hampshire man has the right to drive around the New England state with a license plate reading "COPSLIE," the state's top court ruled on Wednesday.

The state Supreme Court upheld a challenge to Department of Motor Vehicles rules, finding they were unconstitutionally broad by allowing officials to deny requests for vanity license plates that "a reasonable person would find offensive to good taste."

The man, who in 2012 legally changed his name to "human" from David Montenegro, requested the plate in 2010 and sued the state when it denied his request, instead offering a plate with his second choice, "GR8GOVT."

The court ruled that rules based on standards of taste were too broad and therefore likely to be used arbitrarily or in a discriminatory fashion.

State officials could not be reached for immediate comment on Wednesday. REUTERS

Monica Lewinsky, the onetime White House intern whose 1990s affair with Bill Clinton nearly brought down his presidency, broke a long silence on Tuesday, saying she regretted what happened.

Writing in Vanity Fair magazine, Lewinsky, 40, said it was time to stop "tiptoeing around my past — and other people's futures. I am determined to have a different ending to my story."

"Any 'abuse' came in the aftermath, when I was made a scapegoat in order to protect his powerful position," she said in excerpts of the article published on the magazine's website. REUTERS

'American Idol' runner-up Aiken leads in Congress race

Aiken holds a slim lead, the election is too close to call. / GETTY IMAGES

Politics. Aiken's first foray into politics brought celebrity buzz and national attention to the Democratic contest.

"American Idol" runner-up Clay Aiken held a narrow lead on Wednesday in his bid to become the Democratic nominee for a North Carolina congressional seat but could face a recount with a challenger who trails by fewer than 400 votes.

Aiken, 35, surpassed the 40 percent of votes needed to avoid a runoff, but North Carolina law allows for a recount when the spread between the top two finishers is 1 percent or less.

Crisco, 71, said the election remained too close to call but did not signal whether he would request a recount.

"This election is still very tight," he said. "I want the elections officials to have an opportunity to tally the votes and provide a report on their canvass activities to allow all the campaigns a chance to see the final numbers."

Aiken's campaign did not immediately comment on the results on Wednesday.

Aiken, who taught special education in North Carolina before his 2003 "Idol" appearance, earned respect from voters and pundits by proving knowledgeable about policy issues. He was outspent by Crisco, who ran four television ads compared to Aiken's one.

The primary vote tally, which included 19.63 percent for Morris, could change as provisional ballots and some additional absentee votes are counted, said state elections board spokesman Josh Lawson. REUTERS

Putin calls on Ukraine rebels to put off vote

Referendum. Putin's call comes five days before a secession vote was due to take place.

Russian President Vladimir Putin called on pro-Moscow separatists in Ukraine to postpone a vote on secession just five days before it was to be held, potentially pulling Ukraine back from the brink of violent dismemberment.

It was the first sign the Kremlin leader has given that he would not endorse a referendum planned for Sunday by pro-Russian rebels seeking independence for two provinces in the east, and Russian analysts said they believed the rebels would heed Putin's call to put off the vote.

In what could be a breakthrough in the worst crisis between East and West since the Cold War, Putin also announced he was pulling Russian troops back from the Ukrainian border.

However, NATO, the Pentagon and the White House said they had not seen any signs of a Russian pullback from the frontier, where Moscow has massed tens of thousands of troops, proclaiming the right to invade Ukraine to protect Russian speakers. REUTERS

Control. Ex-NSA chief says Snowden being manipulated by Russia

Edward Snowden, who revealed the government's data-collection programs, is now likely under the control of Russian intelligence agencies, according to former NSA director, General Keith Alexander.

Alexander, who retired on March 31, made the comments in an interview with The Australian Financial Review newspaper to be published today, a transcript of which was made available to Reuters ahead of publication.

Alexander, the longest-serving director of the NSA, also spoke in favor of backing Japanese militarization to counterbalance China and warned that a lack of norms governing cyber-conflict could trigger a war between traditional foes like North and South Korea. REUTERS

Vietnam and China face off in South China Sea

Vietnam said on Wednesday a Chinese vessel intentionally rammed two of its ships in a part of the disputed South China Sea where Beijing has deployed a giant oil rig, sending tensions spiraling in the region.

The Foreign Ministry in Hanoi said the collisions took place on Sunday and caused considerable damage to the Vietnamese ships. Six people suffered minor injuries, it said.

Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, James Franco has some kinky new franchise ideas, Miles Teller doesn't understand some old expressions, Patton Oswalt is celebrity-obsessed and Olivia Wilde is feeling less fashionable since she had a kid.

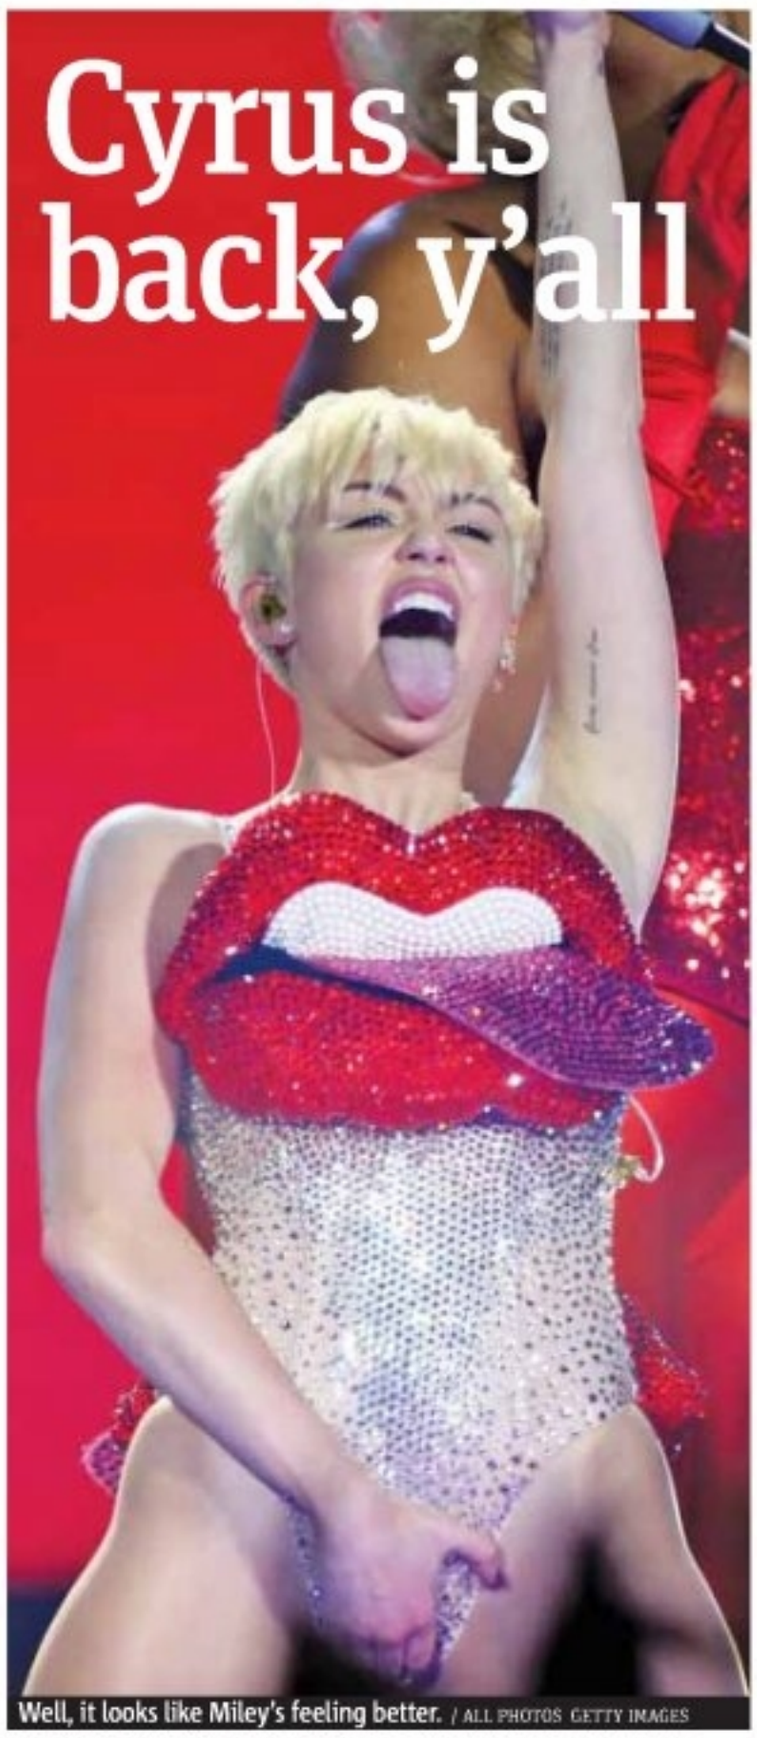
@JamesFrancoTV: '50 shades of batman and robin w/ Spider-Man'

@Miles_Teller: Just weighed myself 'soaking wet' and it was pretty much the same thing

@pattonoswalt: Totally just saw the green dragon from GAME OF THRONES drinking at Little Dom's.

@oliviawilde: This year, instead of attending the 'Met Ball,' I leaked milk, and ate an entire napkin while inhaling a felafel.

Cyrus is back, y'all



Well, it looks like Miley's feeling better. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Miley Cyrus proved to the world she is back and better than ever on Tuesday night at the O2 arena. The show marked the relaunch of her "Bangerz" tour after she had to cancel several shows due to an allergic reaction that landed her in the hospital for more than a week.

And yes, it really was an allergic reaction.

"I didn't have a drug overdose," she confirmed, yet again, at a Tuesday press conference before the show. "I took some ... antibiotics that a doctor gave me for a sinus infection, and I had a reaction."

She claimed she's all better now. "I'm feeling good, I'm alive — so that's f—king awesome. I'm the poster child for good health." She's even taken drastic steps to maintain it: "I'm on this crazy vitamin rush and crazy honey and lavender. I learned a lot about taking care of myself," she explained. "I'm probably the only one on this tour who doesn't drink or smoke before a show, as I take this really seriously. It's almost like being an athlete up here, because if someone was f—ked up, they definitely couldn't do my show."

If the above photo is any indication, it looks like Cyrus is back to her old antics. Lily Allen certainly thought so. "That was basically the best thing I've ever seen #Bangerz-Tour #MileyCyrus," Allen tweeted, along with a string of happy emojis.

Clooney's wedding will be very soon

CLOONEY AND ALAMUDDIN

Does anyone else feel like like Clooney's quickie engagement to Amal Alamuddin is because of a baby Clooney in the oven?

It was just so quick, so sudden, and now there are reports that the two are wasting no time in tying the knot, with a fast-approaching wedding date, according to Radar Online.

"The wedding is to take place in September," a source says. "They've told family and friends they will only disclose the location at the last minute, and it will be very private. Neither George nor Amal want the wedding to be a public affair — and her family doesn't either."

Then again, celebrities these days don't have to get married if they are expecting a baby. It's not 1950s-era Hollywood. Clooney would have to do much, much worse than have a child out of wedlock to harm his reputation. Probably, like, kick a puppy or something. Even then, I bet the housewives of America would probably forgive him.

Willis welcomes fifth daughter

Bruce Willis can really produce baby girls.

The actor welcomed his fifth daughter into the world on Monday. "Both mother and baby are healthy and doing beautifully," reads a statement from the rep. "Mabel is delighted to have a new baby sister."

Willis and his wife Emma Heming-Willis named the girl Evelyn Penn Willis. Willis' other daughters are Mabel Ray, 2, and, with Demi Moore, Tallulah, 20, Scout, 22 and Rumer, 25.

Bieber's new girlfriend

Justin Bieber's on-again, off-again relationship with Selena Gomez must really be off again, as the Canadian pop star has apparently been cozying up to 18-year-old Miami-based model Yovanna Ventura, according to E! News. Bieber apparently first spotted Ventura on Instagram and reached out to her, meeting up with her when he was in Miami in April and then this month in Las Vegas before heading to L.A., where they were spotted acting "like a couple" on the Venice Beach boardwalk. "Justin seemed very chill and happy," a source says, adding that Bieber had his arm on Ventura's leg for the entirety of a shared rickshaw ride. "It hasn't been too hot and heavy, but they have been hanging out a lot. I wouldn't be surprised if they have now started dating." And Ventura, who towers over Bieber in their photos together, still has high school graduation back in Miami to think about. "She started modeling about a year ago. She is just starting out, but she has a talent for modeling," the source explains, adding, "She has mostly been focused on school."

‘Fed Up’ with sugary food

Documentary. Katie Couric’s new film digs into the food industry.

If someone claimed that everything we’ve been told about food and exercise for the last 30 years is dead wrong, and had facts to prove it, you’d pay attention. That’s the premise of “Fed Up,” a new documentary from producers Katie Couric and Laurie David, directed by Stephanie Soechtig, that might change the way you see food — especially sugar and processed foods — and the government’s role in its labeling.

“I’ve always been hyper-aware of food values and what I’ve fed my family, but going through the process of discovery that was ‘Fed Up’ was an eye-opener,” said David during a screening at the Kimmel Center. “No matter what you think you know, there’s always more to be learned.”

David has been down the documentary road before: She won an Academy Award as producer of the global warming doc “An Inconvenient Truth.” She’s also co-authored culinary tomes, including the newly published “The Family Cooks: 100+ Recipes to Get Your Family Craving Food That’s Simple, Tasty, and Incredibly Good for You,” with Couric penning its foreword.

It was Couric’s coverage of the childhood obesity epidemic during her 35 years in TV news that sparked the idea for “Fed Up.” From there, Couric convinced filmmaker Soechtig to jump behind the camera and asked David to co-produce. “I immediately said ‘yes,’” exclaimed David. “You couldn’t help but want to take action.”

With “Fed Up” unfurling like a cross between cigarette industry riposte “The Insider” and documentarian Michael Moore’s incendiary “Roger & Me,” it’s hard for viewers not to agree with David, especially when Couric reports that, “In 1980, zero kids had been diagnosed with type 2 diabetes. By 2010 it was close to 57,000.”

The dramatic information in “Fed Up” is revealed by nutrition experts and politicians like Michael Pollan and Bill Clinton, who have long fought against sugar and food additives. The film sheds light on heartbreaking stories of overweight kids — including a 12-year-old girl weighing 212 pounds — warring to lose weight through traditional diet and exercise. It’s an uphill battle, says the film, considering that sugar is as addictive as cocaine and the Department of Agriculture shills for the food industry rather than advocating for the health of this country’s youth.

“We’re looking to edit ‘Fed Up’ into a shorter version and make it available to schools,” said David. “Telling parents and kids about the dangers of sugar is as important as warning people about cigarettes.”

Zac Efron and Dave Franco do their favorite Robert De Niros in "Neighbors." / GLEN WILSON

What you'll see

'Neighbors'

1 Seth Rogen is getting old (OK, he's 32), which means it's time for him to square off against the younger generation, namely as a new dad peeved at the frat that's moved in next door, led by young kid Zac Efron (OK, he's 26).

ADMIT ONE

Metro rounds up what's in cinemas this week.

MATT PRIGGE

The women of "Moms' Night Out" have wacky adventures. / SAEED ADYANI

2 'Legends of Oz: Dorothy's Return'
If you think an animated film boasting Dan Aykroyd, Jim Belushi and Martin Short released by a small studio with animation that looks like cut-scenes from 1990s video games is some quickie cash-in on "Oz the Great and Powerful," think again! (Or don't.)

3 'Moms' Night Out'
Another stealthily religion-driven mainstream opus, this comedy finds mothers Sarah Drew and Patricia Heaton getting into crazy but very PG-rated danger, with wild cards like Sean Astin and Trace Adkins thrown in.

4 'Belle'
The obscure story of Dido Elizabeth Belle (Gugu Mbatha-Raw), an heiress of mixed race who struggled to navigate 18th century England, gets a very Jane Austen-style movie, albeit one that slips politics in among the courting.

5 'Locke'
Hope you like Tom Hardy, because he's the only person in this drama. He plays a construction foreman negotiating his way out of kerfuffles via endless phone calls made from his car.

6 'Young & Beautiful'
One time French enfant terrible Francois Ozon ("Swimming Pool") is no longer young, but he's still a bad boy. His latest has a teenager (Marine Vacth) taking sexual exploration so far that she becomes a prostitute.

7 'Fed Up'
The latest documentary that tells you everything you're doing will kill you, this takes another critical look at the food industry and how the products it creates are actually making us sick.

8 'The Galapagos Affair: Satan Came to Eden'
Uncovering crazy human activity on Darwin's favorite island, this doc examines a 1930s murder case, and does so with an all-star voice cast, including Cate Blanchett and Josh Radnor.

9 'The Amazing Spider-Man 2'
The second in a reboot of a franchise that happened only last decade deviates from the originals, having Andrew Garfield's Spidey fight Electro (Jamie Foxx) and — oh wait, Green Goblin (Dane DeHaan) is here too. That's not new.

10 'The Other Woman'
Nick Cassavetes ("The Notebook") does another film that his father, director John Cassavetes, likely never would've touched: a comedy in which three women gang up on the man they're all sleeping with.

‘Comedy Bang Bang’ gets serious

See more at www.metro.us

Interview. Scott Aukerman tells how politicians and the dead could spice up his show and other plans for the future.

As “Comedy Bang Bang” begins its third season, the creators of the show are still trying out new things. Watch host Scott Aukerman awkwardly (yet hilariously) interview such stars as Fred Armisen, Lizzy Caplan and Patton Oswalt in the new season. Aukerman answered questions about what changes viewers can expect.

How serious is Scott Aukerman being about the changes to his show? Tune into the “Comedy Bang Bang” premiere tonight on IFC at 10:30 p.m. to see. / IFC

Q&A

Who would your dream guest be?
The whole first season I would get that question. I would say Pee-wee Herman all the time and he ended up being on the show because of that, so I’m going to throw out some random people and hope they are Googling their names. Definitely David Letterman. I think Martin Short is another person that I’ve been trying for three years to get on that I would love to interview because I think he’s just the funniest human. And I think Joe Biden. I think dead people. I’d love for dead people to start coming back to life, because there’s a whole bunch of them. Plato.

After the third season, you’ll be going more serious?
Very serious. Very dry, yes. Informational! That’s what I want people to say about “Comedy Bang Bang.” I want them to turn off the TV and say, “Well, that was informational!”

If you did get Joe Biden, what would you have him do?
If Joe Biden came on the show, I think we’d probably make an election special, even though the election’s still a little while away. ... I think we would try to get him to announce his candidacy on our show. That’s what we really need on our show: a serious politician. I’d love to switch it up and instead of doing goofy silly questions, just ask serious, direct questions about policy.

Fixes for your summer hair care issues

See more at www.metro.us

Heat. Dry? Brassy? Chlorinated? Rita Hazan offers advice.

Summer's the ultimate time to let your hair down — but you won't want to if you're facing some funky summer hair issues such as brittleness or faded, wonky color. We tapped Rita Hazan, who works with Beyonce, Katy Perry and other A-listers, for her advice on all your warm-weather hair care woes.

'My hair gets brassy during the summer.'

"Over time, brassiness happens; it doesn't matter what color you use [or] what you're doing to your hair. You'll have to do something to counteract any environmental problems that occur. The best way to prevent brassiness is to put a gloss on your hair. I have a product called Breaking Brass — use it the first time you wash your hair after you color [and] every time you wash your hair. This is gonna be the new way to take care of your hair: Shampoo, gloss, condition. Use this every time, [and] you'll prevent any kind of brassiness. If you haven't done the gloss and it's brassy already, then just start using the gloss from now on, and it will help eliminate some of the yellow-orangey tone."

'I want to go lighter, but I don't know how to choose highlights that will look good on me.'

"Stay in the same color range, just go maybe two to three shades lighter. If [currently] you're buying 'Golden Blonde,' buy 'Light Golden Blonde' color. It's going to get lighter in the sun, too, so start out a little bit darker and let it naturally do its thing. [And] always use a shampoo and conditioner for color-treated hair."

'My hair feels gross after a day at the pool.'

"Use a treatment. That same night, shampoo your hair, use a treatment, sleep with it in and rinse it out in the morning. [Get] a mask — anything [labeled] 'hydrating' [or] 'moisturizing.'"

'My hair feels like straw.'

"Even if you wear a hat, summer sun and exposure to chlorine and salt water dehydrate your hair. When [your] hair feels dry, it's dehydrated. Regularly use a conditioning treatment or an oil, and you won't have that dehydrated feeling."

'I want to protect my hair from chlorine.'

'If you spray something that has SPF in it, that helps protect your hair from fading and also from getting dehydrated from the sun. If your hair is hydrated and healthy, it keeps the color longer. If you're going to swim, take a bottle of water and put it on your hair first — saturate it — and then go in the pool. If your hair is already saturated with water, the chlorine won't be the first thing to hit your hair. The chlorine will kind of sit on top and won't penetrate [and] go deep into changing the color,' Hazan says.

BroApp. This new app texts sweet nothings to your boo for you

Couples everywhere know that text frequency is a sensitive issue, but BroApp, which just launched on iOS, lets users schedule automatic texts to significant others so they won't get in trouble. We chat with creators Tom and James, who declined to give their surnames.

Do you love your significant other more than Jimmy Fallon? Let him or her know via BroApp. / PROVIDED

How did you come up with the idea for the app?
Tom: I came up with the idea when I was living with James. I was working long hours at work and you couldn't use your mobile phone in my office, and it wasn't very accommodating to the girlfriend. I was talking to James about it and a light bulb moment happened and we thought, "Why don't we set up an automatic text messenger and send, 'Hey, how is your day?' messages to my girlfriend?"

What about after the first text? The app can't continue the chat.
Tom: It's just sort of to start the communication with the girlfriend so there's still communication during the day. It wasn't necessarily to message your girlfriend so you never have to talk to her. The idea was that it sends an initial text to start a conversation, so it's more of a reminder than your relationship automated.

But why do you need an app to do that? Why can't you just remember to text your girlfriend?
Tom: [Laughs] We were always so busy at work or couldn't use the phone.

ANDREA PARK

Real life

Testing, testing

What did your girlfriend do when she found out you had been testing this app on her?
Tom: She was a bit shocked at first, but then she just realized how much I loved her.

So it was a labor of love?
Tom: It was.

Yo, bro

About the name

James: Bro isn't normally used as a positive term. We call it brah, like a self-deprecatory thing. We chose that so people didn't take it as seriously. We're aware of how people perceive it. ... It was a deliberate choice.

Where to take mom

Mother's Day.
Be a good kid and make a reservation at one of these restaurants.

Thanking the woman who gave you life with just any old meal won't fly on Mother's Day. Whether you're making a reservation for a decadent brunch or an elegant dinner, show your mama you appreciate her by bringing her to one of these spots.

Dig into a family-style meal at Little Nonna's. / JASON VARNEY

Be in the know

Jason Cichonski, a "Top Chef" contestant and co-owner of the well-loved Ela in Queen Village, recently opened The Gaslight in the former Philadelphia Bar and Restaurant location. Those familiar with Ela will find similar culinary aesthetics and thoughtful cocktails. On Sunday the restaurant will have a prix fixe menu that includes chilled melon soup, indulgent French toast and, perfect for spring, fruity desserts.

Head to Grandma's kitchen

The "Sunday gravy" dish at Little Nonna's — red sauce, pasta and meat cooked for hours — has a tendency to sell out, so here's hoping the chefs at this warm Italian restaurant inspired by South Philly are making extra this weekend. Just don't tell Mom you prefer Little Nonna's beef, veal and pork meatballs to the ones she makes.

Cool the debate on global warming

Re: 'The sand's getting hot, so don't bury your head in it' (Metro, May 7) Letter writer Carl Hanson needs not be confused about the climate confusion. The main argument is about the cause, not about the existence of global warming. One side says that it is mostly man-made and we should take steps to minimize our contribution to it. The other side claims that it is natural cycle of our planet's warming and cooling, completely outside of our ability to do anything about it.

VLADO HALUSKA, VIA EMAIL

Not a single major U.S. science organization denies anthropogenic climate change. Even the American Association of Petroleum Geologists (see the conflict of interest?) only quibbles about the extent. Skepticism is an important part of science, but the debate is over, and the "free press" argument is inane.

You may choose to willfully ignore the evidence if you like, but giving equal time to climate-change deniers — when 97 percent of climate scientists agree that human impact on climate is serious — isn't responsible journalism.

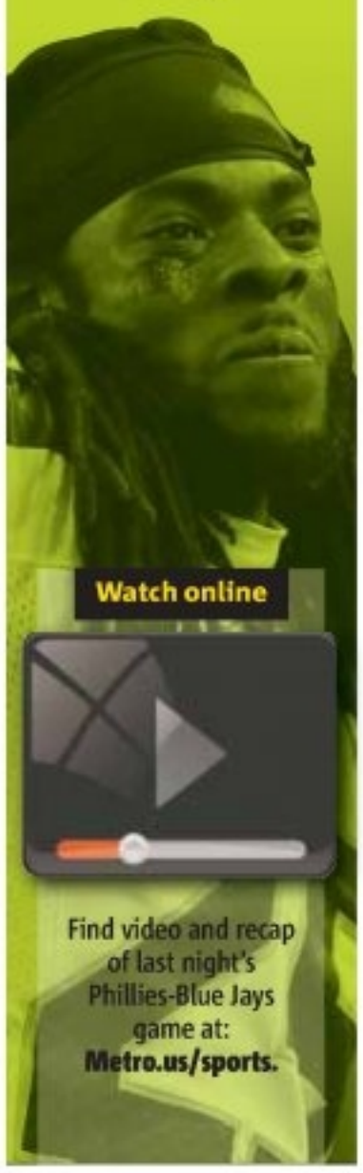
Sherman signs record contract

Seattle Seahawks cornerback Richard Sherman became a household name this postseason, helping anchor the Seahawks' impressive defense en route to a Super Bowl title. He was rewarded again on Wednesday with the biggest contract ever given to a cornerback, four years and $57.4 million. Even more jaw-dropping is the guaranteed money in the deal: $40 million. "The goal has always been to stay in Seattle and continue to play for the Seahawks," Sherman wrote on his blog.



5 Pass rushers who Eagles should draft

The consensus on the Eagles' needs entering the draft has been formed for a while now — a wide receiver to help replace the production of DeSean Jackson, help in the defensive backfield and a pass rusher able to threaten opposing quarterbacks.

We've talked a bit about the first two and now we'll take a look at the third.

The Eagles had 37 sacks in 2013, good (or bad enough) for 20th in the NFL.

They were a lot closer to Chicago and Jacksonville in last place (31 sacks apiece) than to Carolina in first (60 sacks).

Improving the pass rush is also one of the best ways to improve a team's secondary, as the cornerbacks and safeties are asked to maintain coverage for much shorter periods of time. Being able to disrupt the pocket without relying on blitzes will leave more players free to cover as well.

This position is a bit harder to predict for the Eagles than the previous two, because there aren't a lot of 3-4 pass rush prospects grading out around the end of the first round this year. There are a lot of high-end players that should be long gone when the 22nd selection rolls around, and there are some that look like pretty solid later-round picks. We'll focus on the ones who will likely be within the Eagles' grasp when they're on the clock Thursday night.

Kyle Van Noy

Kyle Van Noy, BYU

BYU's Kyle Van Noy (6-foot-3) was incredibly productive playing in a 3-4 defense (like the Eagles play) at Brigham Young University.

In four years, he recorded 25 sacks, seven interceptions and 11 forced fumbles.

He has shown he can recover from injury and distractions to play and produce and has been as adept in coverage as any of the players discussed on this list.

Van Noy will probably be drafted late on Day 2.

"I'm not really particular about where I go in the draft," Van Noy told the Deseret News. "I'm just looking forward to this process being over and being drafted."

Trent Murphy, Stanford

Stanford's Trent Murphy led the nation in sacks with 15 in 2013. Murphy has started the last three years in a 3-4 defense and captained the Cardinal.

Murphy is 6-foot-5 and had the largest hands of any player at the combine. He only ran a 4.86 40-yard dash and may have trouble covering running backs and tight ends in an increasingly pass-happy NFL. Murphy is a second-day draft pick.

MURPHY HAS A LOT OF ATTRIBUTES THAT COULD APPEAL TO THE EAGLES.
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Jeremiah Attaochu, Georgia Tech

Georgia Tech's Jeremiah Attaochu (6-foot-3) has the look of a serious pass rusher who can be successful at getting to the quarterback in any scheme.

He set the school career sack record with 31.5 and recorded double-digit sacks in both a 3-4 (10 in 2012) and 4-3 defense (12.5 in 2013.)

The Eagles should be able to find Attaochu in the second or maybe even third round if they are lucky.

Jeremiah Attaochu

Trevor Reilly, Utah

Utah's Trevor Reilly is another big (6-foot-5) prospect.

With an eye-popping eight forced fumbles and two interceptions in his career, Reilly could certainly be classified as a playmaker.

He also had 20 career sacks.

He displayed tremendous versatility with the Utes, starting games at outside linebacker, defensive end, and inside linebacker.

He could be a steal for the Eagles and they should jump on him if they find him around on the draft's final day in one of the latter three rounds.

Trevor Reilly

Kareem Martin, North Carolina

North Carolina's Kareem Martin is an end the Eagles could consider transitioning to rush linebacker.

He had a great senior year with 11 1/2 sacks and showed impressive athleticism at the combine that could help him make the switch. Martin was a three-year starter and team captain for the Tar Heels.

MARTIN'S STOCK IS UP AFTER A STRONG SHOWING AT THE NFL COMBINE.

NFL draft. Breaking down the Eagles' six NFL draft selections

The Eagles could target USC's Marqise Lee. / GETTY IMAGES

When the NFL draft kicks off Thursday night at 8 p.m., all eye will be on the Eagles, at around 10:40 p.m. when they make their first selection at No. 22.

Though the final decision won't be made until just minutes before the newest Eagles rookie's name is called, here are some suggestions on how the Birds should handle their half-dozen choices.

We take a look at their six selections over seven rounds. They have no pick in the sixth round.

1 Pick No. 22
This pick will set the tone for the rest of the draft.

Unless one of the top safeties fall (which is looking increasingly unlikely) expect to see them go wide receiver or corner here.

There doesn't appear to be a scheme-fitting pass rusher whose stock warrants this selection. The actual player depends on whom the Eagles' war room covets, but the top targets certainly include Kelvin Benjamin and Marqise Lee if they look wide receiver, and Kyle Fuller if the Birds opt for a corner.

Darqueze Dennard is a great fit, but his stock seems to be rising above this pick.

2 Pick No. 54
If the Birds don't go wide receiver in Round 1, Allen Robinson could be a steal here.

This is also a point where the team could start to look pass rusher, and Jeremiah Attaochu would be a great choice.

They might also have their pick of remaining safeties, and in that case Deone Bucannon is a good choice

3 Pick No. 86
Now the players available include less-finished products and more projects, and one project that might entice the Eagles is Keith McGill. He showed promise after switching from safety to corner last year.

This is the meat of the pass-rush class, and the Birds could look at players like Trent Murphy, Kyle Van Noy and Kareem Martin.

4 Pick No. 122
This is a great spot to find players that have slipped. If the Eagles see a player they grade high above this round, they won't hesitate to grab them, the obvious precedent being Matt Barkley last season.

5 Pick No. 162
Here, look at a pair of versatile linebackers — pass rusher Trevor Reilly and the workhouse Jordan Tripp. Chip Kelly's former player, De'Anthony Thomas, is a playmaker and kick returner who could be available.

7 Pick No. 237
If there is a specific kicker the Eagles like they should take him here, rather than gamble on signing him in free agency.

New Eagles voice

Eagles' stadium announcer Baker will step down

After 29 seasons announcing games for the Eagles, Dan Baker has turned off his microphone for the last time.

The Eagles have decided to make a change in the role and told Baker about the new direction last week.

"Dan is the ultimate professional and even though he was disappointed with the direction we are heading, he was accepting of our decision to make the change," said team president Don Smolenski. "We are very appreciative of his dedication and service. He never missed a single game."

The Eagles have made some considerable improvements to the in-game experience, many of them regarding impressive technological improvements, both audio and visual.

The Eagles say they will begin a search for a new public address announcer and will work closely with an outside agency to aid in this transition.

"I want to thank Mr. [Jeffrey] Lurie, the Philadelphia Eagles and the fans for the privilege of announcing 29 great years of Eagles football," Baker said. "It has truly been an honor."

The Eagles will recognize Baker at the season-opening game against the Jacksonville Jaguars.

2014 NFL Mock Draft | by Matt Burke

No. 1

Texans (2-14)

Jadeveon Clowney, DE, South Carolina — After months and months of speculation as to who would be drafted No. 1 overall, the same thing most everyone thought a year ago at this time is true: Clowney is the best player in this draft. There was a late push from the Falcons to move up to nab Clowney after they put him through a newfangled test — the Force Plate Test. Atlanta was testing whether a great athlete such as Clowney would be susceptible to a major injury. He passed the test with flying colors, adding another reason for the Texans to stand pat.

No. 2

Rams (7-9)

Greg Robinson, OT, Auburn — There's a late push for wide receiver Sammy Watkins at this spot to give Sam Bradford a legit weapon, but head coach Jeff Fisher historically prefers substance over flash. St. Louis goes with the sure thing.

No. 3

Jaguars (4-12)

Khalil Mack, OLB, Buffalo — The 2011 NFL Draft had certain "can't miss" QBs at the time in Jake Locker, Blaine Gabbert and Christian Ponder. It might be wise to stay away from a quarterback here unless they're absolutely certain.

No. 4

Browns (4-12)

Johnny Manziel, QB, Texas A&M — One of the more recent rumors was that the Rams were interested in Manziel. Maybe if he falls to St. Louis at 13, but it's highly unlikely that the Browns, Raiders and Vikings will all pass up on the chance to draft Johnny Football.

No. 5

Raiders (4-12)

Jake Matthews, OT, Texas A&M — The "Raiders Way" hasn't worked since George W. Bush's first term. The old Raiders would have taken Sammy Watkins here. This pick will show a lot about the direction of the franchise.

No. 6

Falcons (4-12)

Blake Bortles, QB, UCF — No, Matt Ryan isn't being replaced by Bortles. Unless Greg Robinson, Khalil Mack or Jake Matthews fall here, expect the Falcons to trade down to one of the many teams desperate for a franchise quarterback.

No. 7

Bucs (4-12)

Sammy Watkins, WR, Clemson— Lovie Smith brought in a pair of defensive tackles in Tommie Harris and Tank Johnson in his first draft with Chicago. But the Bucs' need at wide receiver appears too great for Smith to pick defense.

No. 8

Vikings (5-10-1)

Teddy Bridgewater, QB, Louisville — Blake Bortles is the new "it guy" for most Vikings fans, but every team can't be down on Bridgewater. There's a chance the Vikings could trade down and still select the Louisville QB, but this team is in no position to take risks.

No. 9

Bills (6-10)

Taylor Lewan, OT, Michigan — The Bills are likely to take the best available offensive lineman and in this case, it would be Lewan. The Michigan product would give the Bills' offense a nasty demeanor and help them do a better job protecting their QB.

No. 10

Lions (7-9)

Justin Gilbert, CB, Oklahoma State — The Lions need a cornerback with the ability to make big plays. Gilbert picked off the likes of RG3, Ryan Tannehill and Andrew Luck during his time at Oklahoma State. Gilbert could be the game-changer Detroit needs.

No. 11

Titans (7-9)

Kyle Fuller, CB, Virginia Tech — Many mocks are going with quarterback Derek Carr here for the Titans, but Tennessee could still grab the Fresno State quarterback late in the first or early in the second through a trade.

No. 12

Giants (7-9)

Zack Martin, G, Notre Dame — The Giants will likely look to the offensive side of the ball here, but the real question is, "How do they want to help Eli Manning?" A receiver or tight end is tempting, but Martin would be a safe pick.

No. 13

Rams (7-9)

Ha Ha Clinton-Dix, S, Alabama — Clinton-Dix's NFL.com draft profile says "the hype exceeded his performance in Tuscaloosa." It also says he will be a "Day 1 starter." The Rams simply need NFL-caliber bodies in the secondary right now.

No. 14

Bears (8-8)

Calvin Prior, S, Louisville — We go with Pryor at No. 14. The Bears have a need at strong safety and Pryor is one of those secondary players who is described as a "strong open field tackler" — a lost art for defensive backs.

No. 15

Steelers (8-8)

Darqueze Dennard, CB, Michigan State — Dennard is a distant third cousin of Patriots cornerback Alfonzo Dennard, who despite off-field issues looks on track to be a fixture in the Pats' secondary. This Dennard is even more decorated coming out of college.

Flyers tab Hextall as general manager

NHL. Paul Holmgren becomes Flyers president as Ron Hextall becomes GM.

After faltering in Game 7 of the first round in the Stanley Cup playoffs, the Flyers front office received a bit of a shuffle as former Philadelphia netminder Ron Hextall, previously the team's assistant GM, was named the general manager on Wednesday.

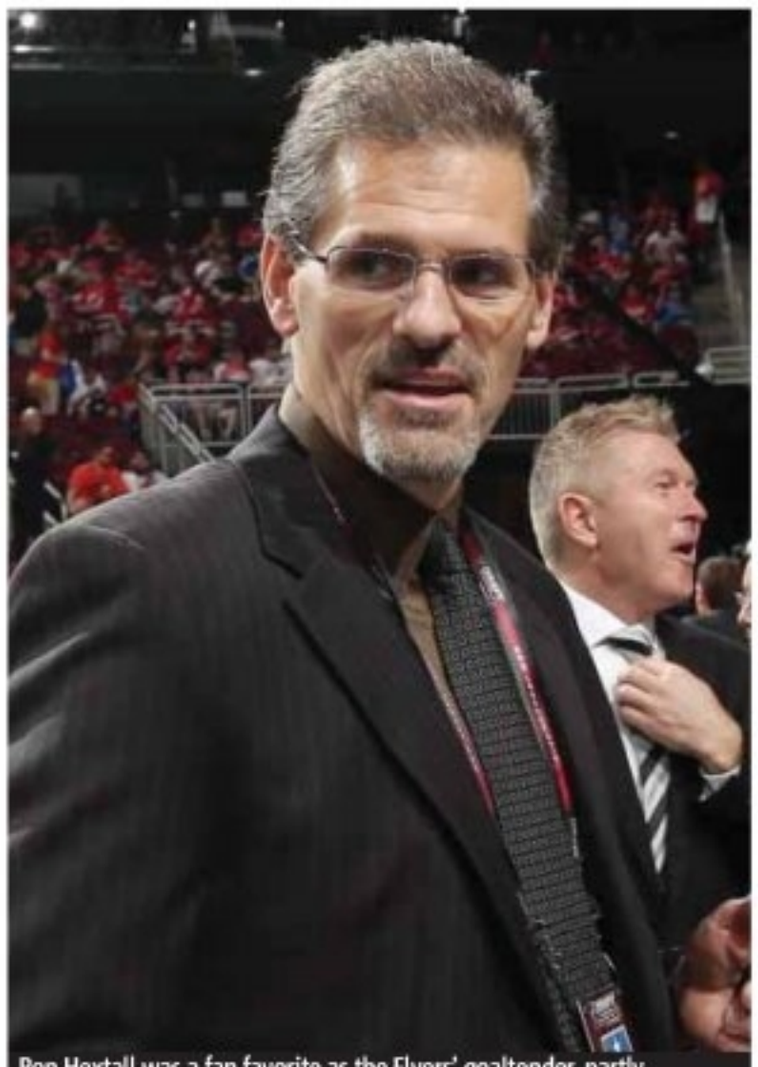
Paul Holmgren was promoted from GM to team president and will report to chairman Ed Snider, while Hextall reports directly to Holmgren.

"I like the business side and there is more I would like to learn about the game from that side," Holmgren said. "I also recognize that Ron is a guy that at some point we were going to lose. Someone was going to come for him and we would've lost a strong asset. A lot has been going on in my mind, but at the end of the day I want to do what I planned to do here and get busy."

Hextall spent 11 years playing for the Flyers and is the franchise's all-time leader in games played by a goaltender (489) and wins (240). Upon his retirement, Hextall moved into the Flyers' front office, where he spent three years as a pro scout and four as director of pro player personnel before joining the Los Angeles Kings in 2006.

Even with a new man calling the shots in the Flyers front office, Hextall doesn't think there will be a big change in strategy. He does, however, want to take a "Moneyball"-like, data-based approach to the game.

"Analytics is where we're going," Hextall said. "I'm very interested in it. It's very intriguing. Why I have an analytical mind, I have no idea, but I do. You can't overvalue it, but in my mind it's going to become more and more valuable, I think, in all sports. It's another tool. Why not use every tool available?"



Ron Hextall was a fan favorite as the Flyers' goaltender, partly because he set the record for penalty minutes for a goalie. / GETTY IMAGES

Quoted

"I'm extremely excited about this new opportunity to manage the Philadelphia Flyers."

Ron Hextall, Flyers GM
